Microsoft 365 Copilot in Microsoft Teams Phone (Early Access Program)

Microsoft 365 Copilot in Microsoft Teams chat (Early Access Program)

The screenshot shows a Microsoft Teams chat window titled "Social media campai...". The left sidebar lists pinned chats, including "Copilot (Preview)" and "Social media campai...". The main pane shows a message from Maria: "While we're on the topic of social media, I've also been exploring other platforms. One option is creating an Instagram page." Below it, Daniela Chocron responds: "Personally, I think an Instagram page could be a valuable addition. It would allow us to showcase the software's user interface and features visually. However, we should consider the additional workload it might bring and ensure we have the necessary resources." Steven Stein adds: "I agree with Daniela. Instagram has a large user base and can help us connect with potential customers. Maria, if you're willing to take on the extra responsibility, we should definitely consider it." Maria Figueroa then says: "Thanks for the input, Steven Stein and Daniela Chocron. I'm confident I can handle it. I'll start working on the Instagram page setup and content strategy then." Maria Figueroa also adds: "Maria Figueroa added Derek Snyder to the chat and shared all chat history." At the bottom, a message from Maria Figueroa reads: "Adding Derek Snyder to the conversation! @". The Teams ribbon at the top includes icons for Chat, Files, and more.

 - Active speaker view in meetings: Speaker view for Teams meetings allows you to effortlessly track the current active speaker. The active speaker's video will be rendered at a higher resolution, providing better visual clarity. The use of 16:9 tiles and consistent placement of audio and video participants on the same stage ensures a fluid experience. Toggling videos on or off will not cause the entire stage to be re-rendered. The main area designated for the active speaker is also utilized for shared content, enabling seamless transitions during presentations. Speaker View is particularly effective in scenarios with a limited number of key speakers and a large audience, such as town halls, trainings, or lectures – especially from the student's perspective. You can select the "Speaker view" option under "View" in the meeting toolbar. This view is not set as a default view.

The screenshot shows a Microsoft Teams meeting titled "Marketing Review" with five participants: Serena Davis, Reta Taylor, Babak Shammam, Danielle Booker, and another participant whose video is partially visible. The shared screen displays a presentation slide. The slide features a pie chart titled "Percentage of Adults with Functional Disability" showing 26% in green and 74% in grey. Below the pie chart is a section titled "The Case for Inclusive Design" with the text: "There are 7.4 billion people in the world. Our ambition is to create products that are physically, cognitively, and emotionally appropriate for each of them. It starts with seeing human diversity as a resource for better designs." To the right of the pie chart is a bar chart titled "Figure 1: Likelihood to Benefit from the Use of Accessible Technology by Type of Difficulty/Impairment among Work-age Adults". The chart shows likelihood levels for Visual, Dexterity, Hearing, Cognitive, and Speech impairments. A callout box indicates a "Zoom: 125%" view of the chart area. To the right of the chart is a table with the same data. Below the chart is another bar chart titled "Figure 2: Likelihood to Benefit from the Use of Accessible Technology by Type of Difficulty/Impairment among Computer Users", also with a callout box indicating a "Zoom: 125%" view.
